PROF. GOUDY PLAYS FOR LOCAL LIONS

Prof. T. Eugene Goudy, the well known teacher of piano and voice and concert pianist, was a guest at the weekly luncheon of the Daly City Lions Club last Monday. After an informal introduction by Neil O. Best, president of the club, Prof. Goudy, by request, entertained the club by playing two piano solos, "Il Trovatore" (Verdi-Dorn) and "The Rosary" (Ethelbert Nevin), arranged for the piano by Prof. Goudy, whose two numbers made a profound impression and were very enthusiastically received by the members present.

It may be of interest to music lovers and people of general culture to learn that Prof. Goudey graduated from the most eminent teachers of voice and piano in Boston, Mass., and New York City, N. Y., followed by three years' study for polish and prestige with the world famous Theodore Leschetizky of Vienna, Austria, the great master with whom Ignace Paderewski, the world famous concert pianist, studied for years. The pianoforte technique Prof. Goudey plays and teaches is therefore the much sought after Leschetizky technique, of which the famous Pederewski is the greatest living exponent. Prof. Goudey's residence studio is located at 207 Hillcrest Drive, Daly City.

INTERESTING MEETING OF P. T. A. LEADERS

The P. T. A. of San Mateo County held its federation meeting Wednesday afternoon at the Oak Tree Inn, San Mateo.

Daly City was represented by Mrs. McIsaacs, Mrs. H. Elmers, Mrs. Junker, Mrs. E. Falk, with Prof. W. J. Savage as their guest.

About 175 representatives from nineteen parent teachers' associations were present at the meeting which was presided over by Mrs. James T. O'Keefe of Menlo Park.

Judge Cutler of Burlingame was the principal speaker, on the subject of "Education." He complimented the organization on its great assistance to the cause.

Miss Pansy J. Abbott, county superintendent, George W. Hall and Prof. Savage of the County Board of Education, each responded briefly as called upon.

The meeting was made interesting not only by the speakers but through an excellent luncheon.

P. T. A. CELEBRATES FATHER'S NIGHT

The Fathers Night program and installation of officers, held at the M. E. Church Friday evening, June 3, was well attended. Mrs. J. E. Baughn, second vice-president of San Mateo district, installed the following as officers for the coming year: Mrs. Rickman, president; Mrs. Lang, vice-president; Mrs. Stevens, secretary; Mrs. Pezzola, treasurer; Mrs. Falk, financial secretary; Mrs. Hutchings, Mrs. Johnson, auditors; Mrs. Secor, parliamentarian.

In recognition of her faithful service, Mrs. F. Junker, retiring president, was presented with a past president's pin.

Much excellent home talent was represented on the program, and for outside talent we are deeply indebted to W. C. Gordon's orchestra of San Francisco, also to Miss Gordon. Their numbers were a splendid addition to our program. To those Scouts of Troop 103, we desire also to express our sincerest appreciation of their aid.

Mrs. H. Secor, chairman of the entertainment committee, wishes to thank all those who took part in the program or helped in any way to make it a success.

The refreshment committee also contributed largely to making the event an enjoyable one. We are again reminded that "cooperation is the life of any organization."

SECOND SYMPHONY CONCERT SUNDAY

The second concert of the symphony series will be given next Sunday afternoon at Hillsborough's Woodland Theatre under the auspices of the Philharmonic Society of San Mateo County.

Nikolai Sokoloff, who conducted the opening concert last Sunday, will again be heard in a varied and interesting program.

Among the compositions to be offered is included the symphony "Israel" by Ernest Bloch, which is to be heard here for the first time.

Mr. Bloch now resides in San Francisco, and is a member of the faculty of the San Francisco Conservatory of Music.

The composer has designated the "Israel" symphony as being in two movements, but it proceeds from beginning to end without pause. The score is of Jewish racial character, yet in the work the composer does not draw on folk tunes for his material. He tries, so he states, to be original and to write in his own individual idiom, drawing from his imagination the colorfulness of this romantic race.

NEW BOOKS AT CITY LIBRARY

Following are a few of the many new books Mrs. O'Rourk has recently added to the shelves of the John D. Daly library:

"Job's Niece," by Lutz.
"Soul of China," by Miln.
"Sea Gull," by Norris.
"Magic Garden," by Porter.
"Spring Tides," by Pinkerton.
"Mantle of Silence," by Rath.

BOARD POSTPONES ACTION ON BIG BAY BRIDGE PROJECT

The application of Charles J. Carey of San Francisco to construct a transbay bridge from Candlestick Point in San Mateo county to Bay Farm Island, Alameda, was postponed until July 5 by the San Mateo county supervisors last Monday. A thorough presentation of the proposed bridge was made before the supervisors by experts and plans and maps showing the proposed structure were exhibited.

M. M. O'Shaughnessy, city engineer of San Francisco, and Supervisors Warren Shannon and Frank Havener appeared before the board and asked that no action be taken on the proposed franchise until the City of San Francisco had its hearing before the war department. The San Francisco representatives stated that they had three projects before the government for consideration and expected action before the end of June.

Attorney Hall C. Ross appeared for Carey and asked consideration of the franchise. Carey then introduced Captain N. A. Gray who gave a detailed explanation of the plans for the bridge and explained the methods proposed for its construction. Captain Gray stated that the bridge would cost $53,500,000, of which $46,000,000 would be spent in San Mateo county. He pointed out how the bridge would avoid interference with the anchorages of the United States navy and stated that by employing cantilever construction, the span would attain a height of 150 feet over the channel and make a draw unnecessary.

A. F. Lemberger, San Francisco attorney and traffic expert, gave a very graphic explanation of the traffic problem as related to the proposed bridge. Lemberger showed carefully worked out maps depicting the various arteries of traffic which would connect with the span on both sides of the bay and gave estimates of the probable number of vehicles which would use the bridge after it was in operation.

Attorney Ross then addressed the board and asked their most careful consideration of the matter. He stressed the point that it was proposed to spend $46,000,000 of the cost of the bridge in this county and suggested that a continuance of two weeks be granted to permit the members of the board and the district attorney to more carefully study the proposition and make any suggestions as to changes in the provisions of the franchise that they might desire. Chairman Poole suggested that this course be followed and a motion by Supervisor Thompson, seconded by Supervisor Francis to postpone action in the matter for two weeks was unanimously carried.

This hearing consumed the entire morning session of the board and just before adjournment for lunch, Attorney John T. Williams, representing the promoters of the Coyote bridge, presented a resolution by which the county supervisors call upon the state engineer to fix the width of the draw in the bridge which they propose to build. This action is required by the provisions of the state law and was unanimously carried.

CALIFORNIA BOYS MAKE GOOD RECORD

The small city band put another feather in its cap at Council Bluffs, Iowa, recently, when Joliet township high school of Illinois annexed the national school band championship a second time from a field of nineteen close contenders. Council Bluffs, Iowa, winner of second place, was nosed out by Joliet by a fraction of a point. Third place was awarded to the Modesto, California, school band, and fourth place to Nicholas Senn High School of Chicago. Special honorable mention was given by the judges to the school bands of Lockport, New York, and Quincy, Illinois, both of whom fought their way into the finals, but which did not get in on the prize list.

NOVENA AT ST. MAXIMUS

Friday evening, June 10, at 8 o'clock, a solemn novena in honor of Our Lady of Perpetual Help will begin in the Church of St. Maximus, Mission and Wellington streets. The novena, which is a nine days' devotion, is in preparation for the feast of Our Lady of Perpetual Help, Sunday, June 19. Besides the evening services, two novena masses will be celebrated every morning at 6 o'clock and at 9 o'clock. The Reverend Henry D. Sutton of the Redemptorist Fathers of Oakland will be in charge of the novena and will preach the novena services.

SPLENDID PROGRAM AT GRACE CHURCH

The children's day program last Sabbath evening at Grace Presbyterian church was a greater success than had been expected. The audience room was filled and the two side rooms were thrown open to the large crowd.

It is very difficult to say which was the best of the exercises. Mr. Butts with his class of boys in their song and sketches of life were splendid.

Mrs. Rae's class of girls, with their spirit of children's day, was a lesson on life. Mrs. Roof's class in the making of the American flag was fine on patriotism, and the many recitations and songs from the little folks brought joy and merriment to those who sat during the program of one hour and forty minutes and all said there was not a dull moment in it all.

At the close one man voluntarily offered $50 toward the building of the gymnasium for the welfare of the community, and so we say let the good work go on until the hopes of the church may be brought into full fruition.

One hundred and fourteen attended the Sunday school in the morning and it is a real joy to have them come to study the greatest of all books—the Bible.

It would not be fair to omit the junior boys taught by Mrs. Gatchell, in their character sketches of the Bible heroes, which brought a long round of applause, nor of Sybil Riddell's class of splendid girls. It was all fine, and the only way for you to believe is to come and see and hear for yourself.

Sunday school next Sabbath morning at 10 o'clock, and then at 7 p. m. the C. E. meeting and at 8 o'clock the evening worship, and your presence and prayers are coveted.

Come let us wear the tugs in pulling and not the holdbacks so much.

CHAS. H. GATCHELL,
Minister.

Enjoyable Week End Party

The Misses Tessie O'Connor, Elsie Fahy, Margie O'Connor, Audrey Diamond, Marge Varni and Lorraine Wall were among the guests who enjoyed a most pleasant week and over the holidays at the beautiful country home of Mr. and Mrs. Kennedy at Rionido, which is one of the prettiest and best located there. There were about eighteen guests over the week end, and all reported having had such a good time that they wished the holidays would last longer.

Makes Splendid Record

John Emerson graduated this year from San Mateo College with the highest possible honors. The good name of Daly City has been upheld by Emerson throughout his college career and his grade in all studies have always been the highest in his classes. In student body activities John has honored his school and his city. We hope with his passing from college life that Daly City may have the good fortune to find a worthy successor for his mantle as a representation in the college.

Relief For Flood Sufferers

The American people have been generous in their contribution to the Red Cross flood relief fund and it has reached approximately the $14,000,000 mark.

A strenuous battle against disease must necessarily be waged in the water-soaked Mississippi Valley, if the death rate is to be kept low. Already thirty-five cases of typhoid fever, sixty-two cases of smallpox and fifty-eight cases of malaria have been reported.

GOBS ARE THRIFTY AND ENJOY SAVING FOR THE FUTURE

The jolly jack tar of his Uncle Sam's navy, with his shiny little "Bob Evans" cap clamped above his right ear and his wide swinging shoreside walk gaited to the heaving undulations of the sea, may radiate somewhat of a "devil-may-care" manner, but his playful ways are somewhat deceptive. He is not the perennial "kid" he seems to be when free from restraint.

Once ashore he may order his "chow" with from one to seven ear-splitting war whoops, or show all of his teeth in smiling approbation when a pretty girl glides by under full sail; he may appear to spend his hard-earned money with all of that hearty abandon for which the followers of the sea are noted; he may delight in casting the impression that he is one yipping, wind-blown, swashbuckling sea lion, who thinks no more of a dollar than he would of an old, worn-out shoestring, but he's just having a good time, that's all—nothing more.

A peep behind the teller's counter of the Bank of Italy reveals the fact that the care-free gob's thrift streak is about as wide as the bottom of his deep-sea-going trousers, despite his playful ways. He's saving his money, this swarthy, salt-cured and seemingly hard-boiled nephew of old Uncle Neptune. More than that, he is indulging in some surprising investments, the bank records show. He may make a great to-do in figuring out how he is going to get enough to eat in the time allotted him for shore leave, but there are times, too, when he quietly figures out the yield on his stock holdings. And, in the vernacular, he owns "some" stock—hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of it, all paid for by himself, and in all sorts of gilt edge enterprises.

And the officers. For fear the impression may gain too wide circulation that they spend all of their money on gold bullion lace, plated gold swords with sharkskin grips, bodkins, cap-straps and girls, those marshalled figures in the bank files may again be brought to light. Many of the erect, square-jawed young gentlemen who keep the gobs in step, will have learned as much about finance as they will have learned about navigation, ballistics and gunnery when they are ready to leave the navy.

Out of something like 30,000 officers and men in the naval establishment on the Pacific Coast, more than 5,200 are depositors in the Bank of Italy. The bulk of these depositors simply instruct Uncle Sam to turn over a certain allotment of their salaries to the bank and these are sent regularly to be applied on their savings. The depositors may either continue these savings on the ordinary 4 per cent interest basis or they may instruct the bank to invest the savings for them in some of its own approved, sure and profitable issues. The results of these requests are extremely heartening and interesting.

One officer on the battleship Arizona has approximately $10,000 in stocks and bonds, his earnings having pyramided from a modest allotment because he permitted the bank to do his investing for him. One gob on the destroyer Farenholt has $5,000 salted away, much of it in investments that may make him a rich man some day. Another gob on the Colorado has $7,500 "sunk" in bonds of the Beverly-Wilshire Drainage District. Stock investments in the Russ Building, San Francisco, the Sacramento Bee, the Hearst Magazines and a wide variety of other issues are held by the bounding, picturesque, care-free boys in the navy's blue, and they are held right down the line, from the deck officers from the humblest member of the "black gang."

Every month the Navy Department turns over to the bank a total of $70,000 in allotments. The total savings of navy men in the Bank of Italy is now close to $1,000,000. Of course, there are a goodly number who withdraw all or part of their savings as soon as they scent a big time ashore. The bank mailed a bale of withdrawal checks to New York when the United States fleet arrived there a few weeks ago and many of the laughing girls of the metropolis and happy gobs from the great big gray ships offshore took in all of the Coney Island whirls on those welcome little squares of paper from the big San Francisco institution.

Some of the boys no sooner make an allotment deposit than they want to drawn it out again. But Uncle Sam says, "No go." They must wait three months for their allotment agreement with the bank to terminate. At the end of that time, when they see their little hoard in the bank piling up, they usually decide to keep on saving.

NATIONAL INTEREST IN VICTORY HIGHWAY

National interest in the completion of the Victory Highway across Nevada from Salt Lake City to San Francisco is exceeding all expectations and confirms predictions of a record-breaking season for cross-country automobile tourists, according to Dr. B. M. Rastall, manager of Californians, Inc.

"More than 200 automobile clubs in the east and middle west have written us asking for copies of our new illustrated folder describing this new way to the coast," said a statement from Dr. Rastall. "We have already distributed 10,000 copies of the folder to clubs that took the trouble to write for them.

"Newspapers of the east and middle west are giving generous space to articles announcing completion of this new, direct, scenic route. It is the outstanding news of the season for automobile tourists, and it will be strange if central and northern California does not become the destination this summer for an unprecedented number of out-of-state cars.

"What particularly appeals to the motoring public is the fact that now for the first time it is possible to drive with speed and comfort over the famous overland route immortalized by the covered wagon, the pony express, and the first transcontinental railroad. Every foot of the way is rich in those legends of the west that are known to nearly every man, woman and child in America because they have been told and retold. Millions within recent years have seen the westward march of the pioneers re-enacted on the screen.

WAR VETERANS MAY LOSE INSURANCE

The San Francisco office of the United States Veterans' Bureau directs the immediate attention of every World War Veteran residing in the San Francisco region to the fact that the time limit to reinstate and convert their lapsed and unconverted war-time insurance is July 2, 1927. Over thirty billion dollars worth of such insurance policies are now ready and waiting in the vaults of the United States Veterans' Bureau to be reclaimed. Veterans are urged to make application for reinstatement and conversion at once because under the law no insurance can be reinstated or converted after July 2, 1927. Veterans should not delay to take advantage of this golden opportunity. No extension of time has been made by Congress. The absolute dead line is July 2, 1927.

Veterans who are unfortunately disabled as a result of war experience now have an opportunity to provide themselves and their dependents with the protection up to the amount of insurance carried while in the service. Such veterans are especially warned to take advantage of the liberal provision of law allowing them to reinstate and convert their lapsed war-time insurance before July 2, 1927.

Veterans are further warned that all war-time insurance now in force must be converted into one or more of the seven standard forms of government life insurance before July 2, 1927.

USE OF THE TELEPHONE SAVES LIFE OF WOMAN

Presence of mind and the presence of the telephone recently saved the life of Mrs. Caroline Neilson, of Redding. While boiling water for a cup of tea, Mrs. Neilson's clothing caught afire. Without hesitation she rushed to the telephone, called the fire department and a doctor, and then jumped into a bathtub and turned on the water.

The telephone was handy and it was used with effect. The bathtub prevented possibly fatal burns. As it happened, Mrs. Neilson was painfully but not dangerously injured.

FLYERS TO START FROM NEW AIRPORT

All doubts as to the possibilities of San Mateo county being the starting point for the Pacific flight were squelched when the San Francisco citizens' committee in charge of the air race announced that work will start immediately on the construction of a mile-and-a-half runway at Mills field, near Burlingame, it is claimed.

The runway will make it possible for heavily laden planes to make perfect starts on their hop-off on the most difficult and dangerous flight yet attempted by birdmen. San Francisco will spend a fortune on its field near Millbrae to make possible the start of the epoch flight in San Mateo county.

Jim Dole, Honolulu capitalist, has offered $25,000 as a prize for the first aviator to span the Pacific in a non-stop flight.

San Francisco citizens have promised an additional $50,000 to the purse, and the total prize offer is expected to attract aviators from all parts of the United States and Europe.

Due to adverse air currents, the flight will be far more difficult than the trans-Atlantic hop completed by Lindbergh and Chamberlin. The danger to flyers is accentuated by the fact that they must unerringly locate what they term "a pimple on the ocean." The trans-Atlantic flyers flew toward a continent. They could not miss land, but the trans-Pacific birdmen have only the small island of Hawaii on which to land. If they err, then another tragedy will be written into the history of aviation.

With the announcement in San Francisco, San Mateo county residents are assured of the privilege of witnessing the start of the flight which will make history. The county as a whole will share honors with San Francisco in the great undertaking.

VIOLATORS OF DRY LAW HEAVILY FINED

Fines and forfeitures totaling $3,800 were collected last Monday by Justice of the Peace Griffin of Redwood City, as an aftermath to three raids staged by Sheriff T. C. McGovern last week in San Mateo county.

Those fined were: Angelo Simonini, of Menlo Park, $500 on Wright act charge and $100 for having slot machines; Angelo Luvisatt, of Lawndale, $500 on Wright act; Roy Peterson, of Portola, $500 on Wright act; Bill O'Keefe, of Beresford, $500 on Wright act; William Real, of Colma, $500 on Wright act charge and $100 for having slot machines; John Pera, of Colma, $300 on Wright act charge; Louie Bergamaschi, of Twelve-mile house, $500 on Wright act.

The bail of Tony Marquis, of Lawndale, was declared forfeited by Justice Griffin when the accused man failed to appear in court. Fines of $300 were assessed against Pera and Bergamaschi because they only had wine in their possession when arrested.

Charge of violating the Wright act pending against Pauline Rudlick, of the Villa hotel, Lawndale, was dismissed because of lack of evidence.

That wonderful picture, "The Last Frontier," is coming to the State Theatre for two days, Wednesday and Thursday, June 15 and 16. Those who have seen "The Last Frontier" will want to see it again, while those who have not seen it should not miss this opportunity.

The double feature program at the State Theatre next Sunday, June 12, consists of Hoot Gibson in "The Denver Dude," and Robert Agnew in "Racing Blood." Both pictures come highly recommended.

Evans Woollen of Indiana is suggested as the Democratic candidate for president, but we doubt that he would appeal strongly to the cotton belt.

MELONES PROJECT NOW COMPLETED

The Melones dam, joint property of the South San Joaquin and Oakdale irrigation districts and the Melones power house built by the Pacific Gas and Electric Company will be formally placed at the service of the people on June 11, with appropriate ceremonies.

The completion of the development demonstrates a principle that farmers primarily interested in water for irrigation and power companies primarily interested in water for power can, although adhering to their primary interests, aid each other.

Approximately 300 people from all sections of northern California will be present when the plant is put into operation. An excursion including newspaper men representating all the leading publications in northern California will leave San Francisco in the morning by automobile. The party will pass through a section of the South San Joaquin and Oakdale irrigation districts and arrive at the dam at 11 o'clock.

Following a luncheon at the power house an inspection will be made of the new plant which will then be placed in operation. Among the speakers and guests will be directors of the irrigation districts, power company officials and representatives from all the leading newspapers in central and northern California.

The expenditure of $4,700,000 for the project represents a novel agreement between the irrigation districts and the power company. The project embodies practically all the ideas advocated by Secretary of Commerce Herbert Hoover, who has challenged the west to make double use of its water resources.

Each district bonded itself in the amount of $1,100,000 for the construction of the dam and the power company constructed a power plant costing $2,500,000, capable of generating 36,000 horsepower.

In exchange for the use of water passing through the dam the power company will pay the districts the sum of $5,175,000 over a period of forty years, this amount entirely paying off the bonded indebtedness of the districts, plus the interest.

The development is located on the Stanislaus river about 12 miles below the famous mining town of Melones and eight miles west of Jamestown, or "Jimtown" of the the days of '49.

The reservoir will have a capacity of 112,500 acre feet of water. The dam is 185 feet high and is declared to be the second largest overflow type dam in the United States. All other dams provide spillways for the escape of water if the reservoir is filled.

The length across the crest of the dam is 290 feet. When the water is released it passes through a horseshoe shaped concrete lined tunned 14 feet in diameter and approximately one mile in length to the power house, where it is separated into two pipe lines, each extending to a 18,000 horsepower electric generator in the new plant.

The water, after passing through the power plant continues to flow down the Stanislaus river to the Goodwin dam, jointly owned for several years by the irrigation districts. From this point it is allocated to the ditches and flumes for irrigating purposes.

The power generated in the plant is transmitted to the Manteca substation of the power company where it enters the interconnected network of power lines and is available for use in California homes, factories and farms.

AIRPORT BACKERS SEEK RESTRICTION

The new Peninsula airport near Millbrae will be surrounded with a "low building zone" if plans of San Francisco authorities submitted to San Mateo county supervisors at Redwood City last Monday afternoon are followed. The communication, asking the county to limit surrounding territory to low structures was referred by the board to District Attorney Franklin Swart.

A survey of Willow road with a view to widening and repairing the principal approach to the new Dumbarton bridge through Menlo Park was approved on application of the Menlo Park Chamber of Commerce. County Engineer Geo. A. Kneese was requested to proceed with the survey.

Plans of a new home for Superintendent James Eubanks of the San Mateo County Relief Home, to be erected along with other buildings forming the new county institution just west of San Mateo, were approved on presentation of Architect W. H. Toepke and advertising for bids authorized by the board.

RECORD IN FIRE PREVENTION

Caldwell, Idaho, with 5,000 inbabitants, had a fire loss of only $1,288 last year, or 25 cents per capita. The national average is about $5.

The Caldwell fire chief generously says that public co-operation in preventing fires and in sending in instant alarms when fires do occur, makes possible this record.

In other words, it is every man's business, and if every man does it well the fires simply do not happen. Fire is not unexplainable, mysterious. Always it has a traceable, physical cause as easily eliminated before as sleuthed up after the fire.

The American fire loss of $550,000,000 a year is mostly preventable, as the Caldwell fire chief inferentially says, and as proved by Caldwell's record.

Anyway the old-fashioned roads were almost as good as the modern detours.

Our idea of a "HOME" bank

Property Ownership The Bank of Italy is a substantial property owner. The taxes that the bank pays each year are a continuing source of revenue to, and support of, local affairs.

Home Management Officers and employes of the Bank of Italy make their homes here: Real "Home Folks." They earn, and spend their money in this community.

Local Loans Money deposited with the Bank of Italy here, [as well as in the metropolitan centers of the state] is loaned when necessary to the people and business establishments of this city. Seasonal peak loaning requirements at this branch [if in excess of local deposits] can always be provided for.

Home Owned The people of this community are the stockholders of the Bank of Italy. They have invested their money in this institution because it is a community enterprise. As a matter of fact, the Bank of Italy has more stockholders—a more local and democratic ownership—than any other bank in California; or for that matter, in the entire United States.

Community Dividends Thousands of dollars in dividends are paid into this community every year, increasing to a considerable extent the volume of local business. Much of this money is earned elsewhere by the bank, and the payment to the people here is indeed a real source of added income.

Your Bank, wherever you go in California After all, California is one state and the Bank of Italy is the only financial institution that provides unified and uniform statewide banking service—affording metropolitan banking facilities in terms of local requirements, and with the real Home viewpoint.

PROPER WALK ON COUNTRY HIGHWAY

Children in Rural Sections Know Better Than Walk With Traffic.

Do you know the proper way to walk on a country highway?

Most persons, especially the city bred, do not, and so the Chicago Motor club, in the poster issued to school children, illustrates the proper method of walking on a country road.

Children Visit Country.

In 25,000 classrooms in this territory the following bulletin, prepared by the club, will be read:

"June days are here; many children living in cities and towns will go to the country. The lesson taught by the poster does not apply to country children. Children who live in the country know better than to walk with traffic, that is, to walk on the right side of the road. Country children always walk on the left side of the roadway, against traffic. Visitors from the city and town are the ones who need this warning.

Some Drivers Careless.

"Cars travel swiftly on country highways; drivers are not looking for anything to cross their paths. If you were to walk with traffic a car might bear down upon you before you could get out of the way or before the driver could stop his car. Many accidents have happened in this way. Drivers whose vision has been obscured by other cars, a turn in the road, a hill, or by poor light have struck persons walking on the right side of the roadway. These accidents, never would have happened if the persons injured had known that the only safe way to walk on a country road was to walk against the traffic."

Speeders Pulled Up by Sounding of Car Horn

One way to make a person behave is to make his misbehavior conspicuous. On this theory, a plan is to be tried in California of sounding the horn thrice when one observes another driver in reckless disregard of law and common safety.

Three toots of the horn are supposed to mean, "Stop that, guy!" It is hoped that this will make the reckless driver ashamed of himself. Perhaps he was not aware that he was doing wrong. Traffic cops say most drivers on being stopped declare they did not realize they were speeding.

If the fellow does not give heed, other drivers are supposed to take up the three-toot cry and the supposition is that the offender will fear that police will hear it and interpret it as meaning "Stop that guy!" Same words; just a comma left out.

Flattening of Springs Interferes With Action

Keeping springs fit is not a matter merely of keeping the friction qualities between the leaves constant and in keeping with the car. A point usually overlooked is that springs tend to flatten out so they are unable to do their best work. This also interferes with the action of the devices that control the spring recoil.

It is the first half-inch of spring deflection that makes for the easiest ride. This is when the springs are doing their best work as the car's natural shock absorbers, and no amount of added equipment can compensate for this loss, which develops through wear. When springs flatten just a quarter of an inch, it is obvious that this much of their first half-inch of best deflection has been sacrified.

The remedy is to have them removed and rearched.

Open Garage Doors

Be sure that the windows and doors of your garage are open ere starting your automobile, cautions a bulletin issued by the national safety council, which reminds motorists that all gasoline engines when running generate carbon monoxide gas. Scores of motor vehicle owners have died as a result of breathing a small quantity of this odorless gas which cannot be seen. Fresh air alone will avert this hazard.

Obedience to Traffic Lights Is Important

Now that traffic lights have become rather universal in large cities as well as in small towns, it is important that every automobile driver get behind the movement to use these signals to the very best advantage. They are not perfect by any means, but with a little co-operation from the progressive car owner and driver, it is obvious that many of the present difficulties will be ironed out and the situation cleared to the advantage of everyone.

One thing to remember in driving through a city in which traffic light signals are employed is to stop on the far side of any street intersection when it is possible. Very frequently when driving along the street one sees a friend and stops to give him a lift. At other times it is a case of allowing a passenger to alight. Whatever the occasion may be for stopping, other than those halts required by the exigencies of traffic itself and obedience to the traffic lights, it is best to stop on the far side so that when one is ready to start again, it is not necessary to wait for the signal. Also it obviates the possibility of stopping some other drivers who may be following.

Hooks on Truck Springs Found Handy in Lifting

The installation of heavy hooks on the ends of front springs of trucks has been found convenient, especially on wrecking cars carrying a crane. When the crane is used to lift a heavy weight, the front end has a tendency to rise, but by anchoring it securely with chains slipped over the hooks on the springs, as shown in the drawing, the trouble is entirely eliminated. If the truck is stuck in a mud hole, the hooks are handy for hitching to a tractor or another truck, and there are several other purposes for which the hooks can be used.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Many Baltimore Deaths Blamed on Jay Walking

Baltimore City has more jay walkers than any other city of its size in the country, according to John H. Truett, director of the Baltimore safety council. Mr. Truett made the statement while discussing the increased number of traffic fatalities in the city.

According to a report of the United States Department of Commerce, such deaths increased 125 per cent over the corresponding period of 1926.

"Four traffic policemen are unable to keep the women on the sidewalks at one crossing in the shopping district while the traffic signal indicates 'stop'," Mr. Truett asserted. "Compare that with conditions on the busiest streets of New York, Cleveland Boston or other cities."

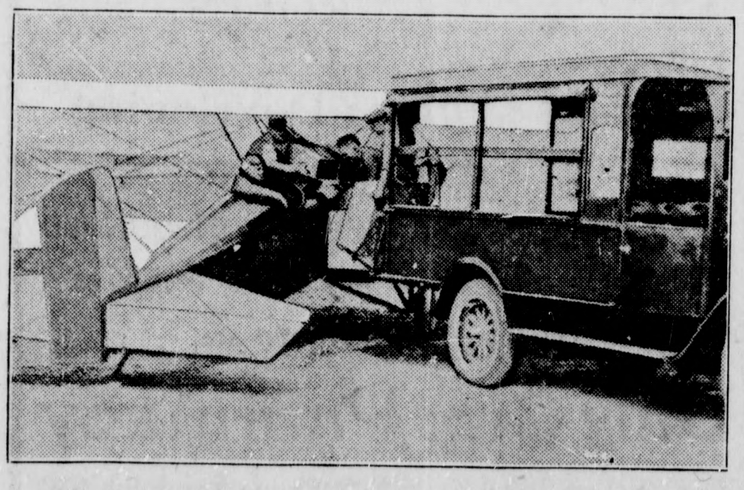
FILING CABINETS SHIPPED VIA AIRWAY



When the Union Trust company of Cleveland wanted a certain type of cabinet and none was to be found nearer than the factory in Buffalo, the latter made delivery by airway and highway in order not to inconvenience a customer. The photograph shows the cabinet being transferred from the plane to the truck at the Cleveland flying field after a 300-mile flight from Buffalo.

CALIFORNIA NEWS BRIEFS

A squad of eight Indian Runners, from which at least four will be chosen to carry the colors of the Oregon Cavemen in the Redwood highway Indian marathon starting from San Francisco for Grants Pass, Ore., June 14, has been undergoing intensive training for the contest under a special trainer. The squad comprises husky braves of the Karok tribe, picked from trapping and hunting country 80 to 160 miles in the interior. The training camp is down on the Klamath river, where the Indians are subjected to a strict daily regimen, starting with a 5 a. m. plunge in the river and a two-mile jaunt and rubdown before breakfast. The day is devoted to combined running and hiking over the mountain trails. The runners will be brought to San Francisco a few days in advance of the start of the race.

Operations of the Decimo club, an organization with the announced purpose of improving the financial condition of the "white collar" employe, are in violation of the corporate securities act of California, it was announced by Howard C. Ellis, deputy state commissioner of corporations. Ellis held the plan of business now being followed by the Decimo club, Inc., and other similar organizations is, in the opinion of the commissioner of corporations, "contrary to the corporate securities act of this state, and in violation thereof." According to information obtained by Commissioner of Corporations John M. Friedlander, the various organizations have a membership of 20,000 on the Pacific coast.

One of science's choice morsels of mystery is believed to have been uncovered last week when a bed of hundreds of live clams was found on the side of Scotia's bluff, twenty miles south of Eureka, and about the same ditsance inland from the Pacific ocean. Workmen operating a steam shovel on the Northwestern Pacific railroad, biting with the shovel into the side of the bluff, approximately 120 feet above sea level and some eighty feet above the Eel river, directly below, traced a path through a bivalvian colony. Those making the discovery said the clams did not resemble the fresh water variety, but were similar to the Tazor clam of salt water.

Apportionment of $4,116,496.66 to the counties and an equal sum to the state from the gasoline tax collections between October 1, 1926, and March 31, 1927, has been anounced by State Controller Ray E. Riley. The money must be expended for maintenance and reconstruction of highways. The apportionment represents an increase of 11.5 per cent over the $3,691,800.21 distributed to the state and the equal amount to the counties for the same period a year ago. The apportionment for the year ending March 31, this year, of $8,450,276.44 to the counties and an equal sum to the state represents an increase of $948,912.29, or 12.6 per cent.

The state board of prison directors has resumed its policy of "open paroles," following the storm of protest that followed the parole of Harry Court, and made public thirty-two cases. It was announced by Mark Noon, clerk of the board, that during the last meeting 194 cases were considered. Of this number 87 were applications for parole and 107 were for the fixing of terms of men sentenced under the indeterminate sentence law. Thirty-two immediate paroles were granted, including eight for deportation and 24 to relatives or suitable jobs.

How many people in California could name 140 varieties of wild flowers without making a mistake? Five boys from Lytton, the Salvation Army's Home and Farm for Orphan Children in Sonoma county, accomplished that feat successfully at a Santa Rosa wild flower contest, thus winning the prize for the William Booth school, which they attend on the 700-acre ranch where they live and study flower lore. Those are the youngsters who recently sent wild flowers to Mrs. Coolidge.

A floating trade exhibit, intended to educate the public in Australia in the superiority of Pacific coast products, is scheduled to sail from San Francisco ports in July, according to an announcement by MacDonald & Co., San Francisco importers and exporters, sponsors of the project. The exhibit comprises displays by numerous coast manufacturers.

Having passed the 5300 mark in enlisted strength, California's national guard now is the strongest in its history. It also is exceeded in efficiency only by the New York troops. Reports received by Adjutant-General L. E. Middlestadt show that during April the 92 organizations in California established a record of 78.82 per cent for drill attendance.

Governor C. C. Young has the disposal of more than 100 state political positions to consider and he must take steps to fill a majority of these jobs as soon as the enactments of the recent legislature become effective next month. Nearly 80 appointments are placed directly or indirectly within the gift of the governor by new legislation and many of the posts involved are new ones. Several of these new jobs carry salaries ranging above $4,000. Notable among these are the positions of director of public works and director of finance, which will pay $10,000 each.

Customs collections in San Francisco last month totaled $1,120,254.49, compared with $1,052,994.49 in May, 1926. During the same month a decade ago the tariff duties collected amounted to $380,785.06.

Freshman hazing has been abolished by volunteer action of the students at the University of California at Los Angeles. There will be the annual class scrap, which will last half a day, but aside from that freshmen are to be unmolested.

The total budget of running expenses for the University of California for the coming year, exclusive of endowments, is $6,287,167. The fund comes out of state revenue and includes salaries for some 1,300 faculty members in addition to many other employes.

The national forests form the home of a part of all the large game found in California and contain, according to a wild life census made by forest service officials, 225,000 deer, 10,000 bear, 1,000 mountain sheep, 400 antelope and 150 elk. In addition there are large numbers of predatory beasts, including 50,000 coyotes, 22,000 lynx and wildcats and 2,000 mountain lions.

Just twenty-four hours after he was forced the first time in his life to forego the annual Memorial day pilgrimage to the graves of his former comrades, Abram B. Covalt, civil war veteran and oldest G. A. R. commander in the United States, who recently celebrated his one hundredth birthday, died May 31 of heart failure at the home of his daughter, Mrs. A. L. Hamilton of Oakland.

Mrs. John Hammond Crabbe, formerly Miss Mary Freeman of Woodland, member of the family which founded Woodland, has been awarded a $35,000 damage judgment in San Francisco courts against Ira O. Rhoades, purchasing agent of the Southern Pacific company, held responsible for an automobile accident in which she was seriously injured. Mrs. Crabbe lost the sight of one eye.

Farwell Brown, editor of the Oroville "Mercury," and his mother, Mrs Murat Brown, were found dead in their home one morning last week from asphyxiation. It is thought that Mrs. Brown, an invalid, succumbed to the gas fumes while she was preparing dinner. Her son, returning, found her, and carried her to the porch. Reentering the kitchen to turn off the stove, he is believed to have been overcome by the gas himself.

Revealing plans for construction of a great reservoir in French Meadows at a cost of approximately $10,000,000, John L. McNab, San Francisco attorney, has petitioned the state division of water rights for a permit to divert 200 second feet of water from the middle fork of the American river in Placer county, and to store 80,000-acre feet in the proposed reservoir. The project contemplates development of 75,000 theoretical horsepower of electric energy.

The Sespe Development corporation announced that it will build a suspended monorail system to connect Fillmore and Sespe Hot Springs, a distance of twenty miles through Sespe canyon. The line will carry both freight and passengers, the cars to run at a speed of 100 miles an hour. With the twenty-mile run taking less than twenty minutes officers of the corporation said that Fillmore and other parts of Ventura county would be brought within an hour's ride of Los Angeles.

Four years will be devoted to the establishment of a wild flower sanctuary in Yosemite valley surrounding the new $1,000,000 Ahwahnee hotel, according to the plans of Carl Purdy, naturalist of Ukiah. "We will attempt to recreate the natural meadow effect in front of the Ahwahnee," explained Purdy. "Hundreds of flowers which are native will be planted there. One side of the meadow will be a rock garden, which will include specimens of the wild flowers found in the higher altitudes."

"The Romance of the Redwoods," colorful outdoor drama featuring the beauties of the primitive woodlands, will be presented under the direction of Garnet Holme as the first annual Humboldt Redwood pageant in the natural redwood forest near Eureka on June 11 and 12. The redwoods play, embodying a woodland motive whose underlying story is the preservation of the giant trees, was written by Holme and Dan Totheroh, both noted for production of pageantry.

Building of a hotel and thirty cottages, nucleus of an exclusive "divorce colony," is proceeding at the south end of Lake Tahoe. The cottages are on the Nevada side of the boundary, with the inn squarely on the California-Nevada line. The project is designed to divert profits of the divorce business from Reno. Residents at the colony will be restricted to divorce seekers. Reno lawyers admit the three months' divorce law is not bringing the rush of business anticipated, and the Tahoe project has caused consternation in local business and legal circles.

GENERAL ANDREWS RESIGNS

Announcement has been made of the resignation of General Lincoln C. Andrews as assistant secretary of the treasury and head of the prohibition enforcement branch of the government. He will be succeeded by Seymour Lowman, former lieutenant governor of New York, but under the new law the prohibition enforcement bureau will be under Dr. J. M. Doran as commissioner, who will succeed Roy Asa Haynes in that office.

During his service in his present capacity, which will terminate on August 1, General Andrews has shown great executive ability and energy in his efforts to enforce the Volstead Act. That he has been confronted with a tremendous task is evident to all. In view of all the circumstances, the wonder is, not that prohibition has been imperfectly enforced, but that it has been enforced as well as it has.

A leading "dry" recently admitted that it might take twenty-five years to attain a satisfactory measure of enforcement, and many will agree with that forecast, however much a more speedy result may be desired.

There has been some criticism of General Andrews because it was known that before he accepted his present office he was not a total abstainer. But he pledged himself to total abstinence while on this duty, and it can not be denied that he has been faithful to his trust. He will leave the service with a clean and creditable record.

ONE EYE ON THE JOB

That a wage earner, whether a laborer or industrial executive, should seek through any legitimate means to better his condition is entirely commendable. But too many seek for such betterment in distant fields, when the real opportunity lies in the present job.

Every employer has to deal with the fellow who no sooner gets located in a position than he begins to look for something better elsewhere. He has one eye on his present job and the other on a new one.

In a majority of cases, particularly if one is working for a sound and reputable concern, an employe would be far better off to concentrate his thoughts and energies on the work he is doing, instead of watching the "help wanted" advertisements.

No intelligent employer wants to lose a man who shows efficiency in his work and loyalty to his concern. The rewards of such efficiency and loyalty will generally be in keeping with the employe's merit.

But when an employer knows that an employe is continually looking for another position, it is taken as evidence that only half-hearted service is being rendered, and the employer begins to look for some one to take his place. The fellow who keeps both eyes on the job usually profits in the long run.

With the Red menace, the Yellow peril, the blue laws and the negro problem, this is certainly a colorful world.

HIS GOOD TURN

That human kindness is still abundant and sometimes manifests itself under unexpected circumstances is illustrated by a little story in the Paris Figaro.

A Paris "young man about town" being driven in a handsome closed car was stopped at a street intersection to let a hearse pass. The hearse was followed only by a woman and two small children on foot. It was raining hard and she was trying to protect them with a shabby umbrella as they sorrowfully followed the father's corpse to the cemetery.

The young man stepped from his car, asked the widow and children to get in, and instructed his chauffeur to take them to the cemetery and then to their home. Then he bowed to the bereaved group and hailed a taxi for his own use.

And the Recording Angel wrote that on that day a blase boulevardier had done his good turn.

NEWTON'S HUMILITY

Celebration of the two hundredth anniversary of the death of Sir Isaac Newton, recently held in England, recalled many personal anecdotes of the great natural philosopher. In spite of his towering genius and scientific attainments, Newton was one of the most humble of men.

As a boy he confessed that he was "far from industrious and stood very low in his class." In fact, it appears that in his earlier years he had what would be called today an "inferiority complex." He lacked confidence in himself. The turning point in his career is said to have been when he mustered courage to whip a larger boy who had attacked him without provocation. This success seems to have led him to greater exertions and he became head boy of his school.

Late in life, after he had given to the world the results of his monumental labors, Newton said:

"I do not know how I may appear to the world, but to myself I seem to have been only like a boy playing on the seashore, now and then finding a smoother pebble or a prettier shell than before, while the great ocean of truth lay all undiscovered before me."

No finer illustration of the humility which usually accompanies true greatness can be found than that.

CAN ANIMALS COUNT

An interesting fact concerning the lions, tigers and leopards in the New York Zoo is related by Dr. W. Reid Blair, director of the park, in an interview published by Farm and Fireside.

Dr. Blair, in describing the feeding of the various animals, says that these big representatives of the cat family are fed only red, raw meat, with an occasional dash of cod-liver oil. Beef is generally used, but horse meat is also given them at intervals. But the interesting thing concerns the day of fasting these animals must undergo once a week. Dr. Blair says:

"Sunday is their fast day, and they know it. On week days just before 2 o'clock the whole cat house livens up. The tigers pace about, the lions stretch and watch the front of their cages, the leopards leap over each other, and like as not the pumas start an argument before their keeper reaches their cage. But 2 o'clock on Sunday is just 2 p. m., and passes with no more attention than any other hour."

Now the question is, how do these animals know when Sunday comes? Can they count the days? There seems to be no other explanation. Or, if there is, the Doctor doesn't give it.

POWER BY RADIO

Recent discussion concerning the ultimate transmission of electrical power by radio was given new impetus by demonstrations before the New York Electrical Society by two Westinghouse engineers a few evenings ago.

These engineers, Drs. Harvey C. Rentschler and Phillips Thomas, displayed electric lamps which were caused to glow without wire connections, and a radio furnace in which chemical reactions were initiated by radio waves.

Naturally, the methods employed in these experiments are of too technical a nature to be readily understood by the layman, but the fact that such startling innovations have been introduced is sufficient to warrant the belief that in time the transmission of electrical power without wires may become practical.

It again illustrates the tremendous possibilities of harnessing unseen forces of nature for the service of mankind.

A HORSELESS FARM

One of the big implement manufacturing corporations has established a farm near Hobart, Indiana, which is being operated entirely by machinery, not a horse being allowend on the place.

This experimental farm will raise a variety of crops, including corn, potatoes, peanuts, and cotton, all planted, cultivated and harvested entirely by machinery.

The planting of cotton so far north is an interesting experiment, but the idea is to demonstrate the practicability of applying machinery in its production and harvesting.

It is estimated that this horseless farm will be operated at a cost of $5.41 an acre, as against about $12 an acre for horses. Farmers from all parts of the country will be invited to visit the farm to see demonstrated the economy of machine farming.

This is but another illustration of the trend of modern agriculture. The farmer of the future will have to adopt labor-saving machinery and sound business management if he expects to survive. Old one-horse implements and slip-shod methods are doomed.

The wise farmer is looking ahead and making his plans to keep abreast with the march of progress.

WORKERS OWN BONDS

Employes of the General Electric Company to the number of more than 25,000 now hold bonds in that corporation, totaling $22,500,000, or an average of $903 for each bond-owning employe.

The wide distribution of stock in the Bell Telephone system is even more striking, there being more than 400,000 stockholders in the system, which is said to be the largest number holding stock in any corporation in the world.

Similar conditions exist in practically all the great utility concerns of the country, most of which encourage their workers to become partners in their enterprises by making the purchase of stock easy through installment payments.

While the total investment in one of the larger corporations is enormous, the percentage held by any one stockholder is usually small. In the case of the Bell system, no stockholder owns as much as one per cent of the total stock outstanding.

The wide distribution of stocks and bonds of big corporations is good for the corporations and good for the public. It inculcates thrift on the part of the small investor, and it gives stability to the industries concerned. It also tends to make the prejudiced appeals of demagogue politicians less effective.

GROW NEW FORESTS

In the past, lumbermen have been criticized for depletion and waste of the country's forests, and it may be that much lumber has been cut without proper regard for future needs.

At present, however, the lumbermen appear to be keenly alive to the necessity for conservation of timber and reforestation of cut-over areas. In fact, such a movement among the lumbermen has been under way in several states for quite a while.

At its recent convention in Chicago, the National Lumber Manufacturers' Association commended the interest in reforestation being taken by the government and by the forestry departments of many states. A resolution adopted by the convention said:

"We urge continuance of this interest and co-operation, both public and private, to bring about sound conditions for perpetuating our forest industry."

Better means of fire protection in existing forests were also recommended, as well as favorable tax measures to encourage private forest-growing enterprises.

The recent floods have further emphasized the importance of reforestation as an aid to flood control. It is fortunate that this matter is engaging the attention of the country at large to a greater extent than ever before. No natural resource is more essential to our national welfore than our forests.

Correct this sentence: "I never take a case," said the lawyer, "unless I am convinced that my client is in the right."

OFFICER SHOT BY LUNATIC RECOVERING

Deputy Sheriff C. A. Callaghan is doing nicely at the Community Hospital at Beresford, where he underwent an operation last week for the removal of a bullet from his abdomen. The officer was shot twice in a gun battle with "Indian John" Robinson more than a month ago, during which the latter was killed. Due to the aggravated condition of the wounds, the bullet could not be removed until recently.

We suppose that E. E. Free, the noted chemist, will eventually retire and enjoy his E's.

THEATRICAL MAN CHOSEN AS MAYOR

H. A. Eschelbach, trustee of South San Francisco and well known theatre manager, has been named mayor of the city to succeed the late Mayor Fred A. Cunningham. Appointment of an additional member of the board, expected at the last meeting failed to come before the trustees. The board has 30 days in which to make the appointment, the next regular meeting on June 20 falling within the time limit, it was pointed out by city officials.

The $40,000 bond election to provide additional fire apparatus and extension of water mains has been postponed by the board until June 28.

TRUSTEES ORDER SALE OF BONDS

Paving the way for utilization of $310,000 bonds recently voted by Burlingame citizens for fire protection and water system development, the board of trustees last Monday night ordered the necessary advertising for sale of the bonds. The bids will be opened at a meeting of the trustees on June 20.

Mayor Harry Totten expressed the desire of the trustees to provide the new improvements as soon as possible and he appointed Trustees M. G. McClinton and Rockwell Stone as a committee to investigate and report on all desirable and available sites for the contemplated fire house.

Canadians and Americans have formed an organization "for the increase of amity between the two countries." We understand that quite a bit has been coming this way already.

FARMER WOMAN IN OKLAHOMA

Praises Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Because It Gave Her Health and Strength

In a sunny pasture in Oklahoma, a herd of sleek cows was grazing. They made a pretty picture. But the thin woman in the blue checked apron sighed as she looked at them. She was tired of cows, tired of her tedious work in the dairy. She was tired of cooking for a houseful of boarders, besides caring for her own family. The burdens of life seemed too heavy for her failing health. She had lost confidence in herself.

One day she began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and her general health began to improve. She took it faithfully. Now she can do her work without any trouble, sleeps well and is no longer blue and timid.

This woman, Mrs. Cora Short, R. R. 9, Box 387, Oklahoma City, Okla., writes: "Everybody now says: 'Mrs. Short, what are you doing to yourself?' I weigh 135 and my weight before I took it was 115. I have taken seven bottles of the Vegetable Compound."

Other women who have to work hard and keep things going may find the road to better health as Mrs. Short did, through the faithful use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Workers Finding More Time for Recreation

The five-day week has been a bugbear to many an employer, but think how near we have come to it already. A hundred years ago the workman labored for 12 hours a day for six days a week, and in return got shelter, food and clothing and not much of any of them. Now, in many industries, the 44-hour week is common, so that the step to 40 hours is short.

And the employers' habits have changed. The afternoon off for golf, the winter vacation in addition to one in the summer, the week-end that begins on Friday afternoon—how many are shocked by these?

The sage Jacob Ruppert, owner of the New York American league baseball team, thinks his possession worth $3,000,000, due to the added leisure of Americans. And golf, he says, has added to the attendance at baseball parks. Interest in one has aroused interest in the other.—Nation's Business.

New York Planning to Put Streets on Roofs

New York city talks of a 16-mile roadway to be built on the roofs of 12-story buildings from the lower part of the city to Yonkers. Gotham's traffic problem is costing the city a million and a half dollars a day. This elevated highway on the roofs would be a motor-express thoroughfare. The man living out of town could motor down to his work without interference of cross-traffic and park his car on the roof of the building in which he makes his living. The improvement would soon pay for itself. Part of the plan calls for a series of moving platforms for pedestrians, along the second floor, the platforms running from a speed slow enough to step on easily, up to 20 miles an hour, to provide free transit on two new north and south avenues. It all reads like an H. G. Wells novel, but it may be realized.—Capper's Weekly.

That's All

The daughter of the house had taken delight in listening to her father dictate the cryptic words of a telegram over the phone. Later that day at the supper table she was making a detailed explanation of something to her mother. Her father asked her, when she had stopped talking, whether she had anything more to say.

"No," she replied, "that's all there is. Period. Stop."

Big Colonies for Brazil

The Brazilian government has just granted to a Japanese company a concession of nearly 250,000,000 acres of land in three different zones in the state of Amazonas for colonization purposes. The company will spend a large sum developing the region in which the concessions will be established.

The average income of people gainfully employed in this country is now about $2,000 a year.

"Not a thing," answered Rawson. "But we were at a disadvantage; not enough light, and it's a good-sized place. We'll comb it over tomorrow morning by daylight. Of course he could have got out on the island—all that kitchen wing's kept open. He might have been lying low up there all yesterday and have come down last night. All quite possible but—well, we'll know tomorrow." He walked to the window and looked out. "Dark as a pocket!" He turned to Bassett: "When the tide's full out could a person get across that channel except by the causeway?"

"There are places where they might swim the stream in the middle. It's a deep strong current but a good swimmer could do it."

"He might try it—he must be pretty keen about getting off here. You know this shoreline. Suppose you go down and take up a station below the boathouse among those juniper bushes. That's a place a person might use as a sheltered start for a get-away. You can't see but you can hear. Take Williams' gun, and if there's a sound, challenge, if there's no answer, shoot. I'll come down with you, I want to take a look at Patrick and I'll stay round myself for a while."

He stepped to the sill of the window but Williams, feeling for his revolver, stopped him:

"Hold on a minute. I got an idea that I think'll help a bit. I've been thinking of it all day and if I'm not mistaken it'll land your man or your woman neater and easier than lying in wait for them outside where they know by this time we've got a guard."

Rawson turned back into the room: "Let's hear it—we want to clear this up tonight. But, Mr. Bassett, you go on. Stop and tell Patrick what you're doing and see that he's on the job. I'll be down with him later, unless Williams' idea opens up something new."

Bassett took the revolver and stepped out of the window.

He reached the boathouse and groped his way about it to find Patrick. Coming round the angle where the man was stationed he pronounced his name and was surprised to get no answer. He stretched a feeling hand which came in contact with a large warm bulk, immovable under his touch and giving forth a sound of heavy regular breathing. His own breathing stifled, his movements noiseless as a cat's he struck a match and sheltering it with his curved hand, held it out. In its glow he saw Patrick huddled on the bench, his shoulders braced against the wall, his head drooped forward in profound sleep.

Pressed against the wall, he calculated the distances about him. The approach to the causeway was to his right, an incline of rocky steps, and in the stillness he could hear the lightest foot descending them. On such a night Joe might venture again—would venture if his nerve still held. If he did it would be within the next hour, and if Patrick slept and Rawson did not come he would go by unchallenged.

A fitful breeze arose, carrying sea odors. He heard the murmurings of the tide growing lower, fainter, till they sunk to silence and he knew the bed of the channel was uncovered.

CHAPTER XII

Williams thought highly of his idea. It had come to him that morning while thinking of the person he had heard descending the stairs, the person he insisted was Mrs. Stokes.

It was a simple and practicable plan—a watch kept for the rest of the night on the stairs and certain points of exit. In the face of positive orders two people had come from the upper floor the night before, Miss Tracy on an errand that Rawson thought suspicious, Mrs. Stokes, in Williams' opinion, to communicate with her husband. Even if both men were wrong some powerful incentive was making them take such risks and it was natural to suppose that incentive might be strengthened after twenty-four hours of strain and uncertainty. They might try it again, and to catch them at it, surprise them in the act—if they didn't break down on the spot—a little grilling would do the job.

Rawson looked at his assistant with an approving eye. The idea was good, excellent, and without waste of time they arranged the distribution of the watch.

Williams would take the front stairs, his particular prey was there and he had already located the position of the electric light button. Rawson would station himself in the kitchen with its two doors one to the outside, one to the hall. The living room they would assign to Shine, less important than either of the other ambushes, but commanding the entrance to the side wing and the path to the causeway and dock. Anyone descending the back stairs to make an exit from the house would either turn to the kitchen or go through the living room, and whichever way they took, would run into a trap. The men were satisfied, each one was detailed to the spot where he might expect to apprehend the object of his suspicion. The living room, central and exposed, might safely be left to Shine.

They found Shine in the butler's room sleeping soundly on the outside of the bed. He was made acquainted with the plan, and stumbling and heavy-eyed followed them. In the hall Rawson left them, taking his way to his hiding place, the other two faring on to the scene of Shine's duties. Here he received his instructions, special emphasis being laid on the door that led to the kitchen wing and the back stairs. Shine looked from the door to Williams with a perplexed frown. He did not like to admit—no more than he had liked to display the healthy vigor of his appetite—that he was so sleepy it was doubtful whether he could keep awake. In this embarrassing position, when he desired to acquit himself creditably and feared the weakness of his flesh, he too had an idea.

They just wanted to know who the person was, didn't they? He wouldn't have to catch them, which would be nearly impossible in the dark and was unnecessary as no one could get off the island. To see them, be able to identify them, get onto who was stealing round the house, was the point. If that was enough he'd a way of doing it, the surest and most efficacious way it could be done, no scrambling round the furniture, no uncertainty—he'd set his small camera for a flashlight photograph. The materials were all at hand. All he had to do was to get them ready and if anyone entered by the door he was to watch, he'd have their number before they knew it.

Williams was interested—it was a neat trick and tickled his fancy. As he was ignorant of the process, Shine explained it, getting his properties from the cabinet as he spoke. The flash-light powder in a saucer on the table, then a double wire extending from it to a point above the door—the pair of antlers would answer. There the wire would be cut, one-half hanging down from the antlers, the other twisted round the door handle, its end standing out. When the door was opened the two severed ends would come in contact and make the circuit which would set off the powder. He did not tell Williams that the taking of the picture could be achieved whether he was asleep or awake, but that the camera would make its record whatever his state was an immense relief to his mind.

Williams left and he quickly completed his preparations. Before he made his final adjustment of the two wires he unloosed the latch of the door that it might open easily and noiselessly at the first push of a stealthy hand. Then, his camera in place, he turned off the lights. The room was suddenly plunged into Egyptian blackness; he had to feel for the chair he had pulled up, and, grasping the tripod, nearly upset it. Swearing under his breath, he found the arms of the chair and let himself down upon it carefully, to avoid creaking. The silence of the house closed around him, a silence that was like oblivion. The darkness showed no break as his glance traveled over it. A solid, impenetrable wall, it was hard to look at, the eye required something to rest upon. After he had stared into it for what seemed a measureless stretch of time, he felt he must shut his eyes for a moment of respite. He did so, his head drooped, nodded, sunk, and he lay a big crumpled figure held in the embrace of the chair.

A bang—in that silence as loud as a cannon shot—a rending burst of light waked him. Then from every side of the house noise broke, groans, screams, slamming of doors, thudding footfalls. Williams' voice shouted the first intelligible words:

"You got them—good work! Where the h—l are the lights?"

That shook Shine into consciousness, and he called to the gallery, whence a patter of bare feet and female cries rose:

"It's all right. Don't be scared. It's only a flashlight."

Male voices followed, harsh and loud, as the men came rushing in.

"What are you doing here? What was that?"

Bassett's from the entrance, his body colliding with furniture as he ran blindly forward. Somewhere in the darkness behind, Stokes', high and choked, breaking into curses. And over all Miss Pinkney's riding the tumult like the war cry of the Valkyries:

"Why don't some of you fools turn on the electricity? The button's on the right side of the door."

Bassett's hand found it and the room was flooded with light.

The women in straight white nightgowns stood on the gallery huddled together. The dreadful darkness lifted, they leaned over the railing, their faces pallid between hanging locks of hair, dropping a shower of questions on the men below. One of them was hysterical and gave forth a sobbing wail, and Williams shouted with angry authority:

"Keep quiet up there. Nothing's the matter. Didn't you hear it was a flashlight?"

Someone strangled a scream—Williams thought it was Flora but could not be sure. Then they made a simultaneous retreat to the bedrooms for negligees and slippers, while the men, gathered round Shine, listened to his explanation. No, he'd seen nothing and heard nothing, but he'd got the picture all right, whoever it was, he had them. Now he'd go and develop it—he could do that in a few minutes—and there was the projector in the corner he could use, throw it onto something where they'd all see. A sheet over that screen by the desk would do.

They urged him out, they'd attend to everything: hurry up with the picture. Williams was unable to hide his elation. His idea, augmented by Shine's, was a bull's-eye hit, and his voice showed an exultant excitement as he called to Miss Pinkney to bring a sheet. Rawson's satisfaction was less apparent, but his eye was alight with anticipation. If it was the boy, he had run back upstairs, for no exit had been attempted through the kitchen. With the whole house astir he'd be afraid to come down and they had him safe as a rat in a trap. Impatient at the wait for Shine's reappearance, he left the room, saying he was going to the boathouse for a word with Patrick.

The noise of the women's footsteps on the stairs came in a descending rush. They burst in, their voices going before them, a scattering of gasped, explosive utterances.

"Can't you d—d women keep still?" Stokes ground out between his teeth.

Altercations Are Made in Course of Years

Most people would think that the word admiral is a typical English expression. Its origin, however, is Emir el Bagh, which is Arabic for "Lord of the sea." The term captain comes to us direct from the Latin caput, meaning head.

The coxwain was originally the man who pulled the after-oar of the captain's boat, then known as the "cock's boat." Cock-boat itself is a corruption of the word coracle, a small round boat used for fishing. Commodore is nothing more than the Italian commendatore, or commander.

Frequently we hear about "Davy Jones." There was, of course, no such person, but should you speak of "Duffy Jonah's Locker," you have the original phrase. Duffy is the West-Indian negro term for the spirit of Jonah.

The term "dog watch" is a corruption of "dodge" watch, the "dodge" being an arrangement to prevent men from being on duty every day at the same hours.

Oldest Fine Art

Architecture is the most ancient of the fine arts. The earliest dated architectural remains are those of the Babylonians, from as far back as 6000 B. C. Their building material was brick, and they were the first to construct vaults and arches.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

MARY GRAHAM BONNER

COPYRIGHT BY WESTERN NEWSPAPER UNION

THE BUMBLEBEE

The fairies had a fancy dress ball, which was one of the most successful balls ever given in fairyland, so you can imagine what it must have been like for they always have wonderful parties in fairyland at any time.

They all went in most exquisite costumes—oh, quite the most beautiful costumes you ever saw.

They all went as different flowers.

One little fairy was dressed so she looked like a bright nasturtium, another was dressed as a pink rambler rose, another as a yellow golden-glow, another as a pansy, another as a little forget-me-not, and all of them, in short, in lovely costumes like flowers.

The Fairy Queen's costume was really gorgeous, and oh, how proud all the little fairies were of her.

She wore the costume of the American Beauty Rose, and her wand was one tall rose very full and big and splendid.

They had dancing and games and all the elves, the brownies and many of the wood creatures had been invited.

But one of the strangest things happened you can imagine. Some of the fairies had dressed themselves as honey-suckles. They kept together and danced together so they would look like a vine.

Others had dressed as a vine of morning glories.

Pretty soon a buzzing was heard. It was louder than the band of crickets they had engaged for the music; it was louder than the sounds that came from the laughter of the fairies.

You see nobody had thought of such a thing happening. The bumblebees and the humming birds, who had all gone to sleep, had in their dreams imagined they saw lovely morning glories still awake and lovely honeysuckles all over the vines.

One little bumblebee went to his smaller brother and nudged him, saying:

"Oh, look over there, morning glories!"

The other little bumblebee was about to turn over and go to sleep, for

he had scarcely so much as peeped to see, when he, too, suddenly noticed all the morning glories.

They awoke all the bumblebees far and near and made so much fuss and noise that they woke up the humming birds, who always notice what the bumblebees are up to.

Of course the humming birds immediately spied the honey-suckles, and you should have seen them scamper.

When the fairies realized what had happened they almost lost their balances in the dances, for they shook all over with laughter.

As the bumblebees and the humming birds got nearer they too, saw that they had made a mistake, but the fairies at once called out:

"Come to the party and dance, too, and we will give you honey, for we are having it for supper.

"We couldn't give a ball and dress like flowers without having flower-honey for supper."

And this delighted them all.

What Betty Wanted

Betty Jane and mother spent a week in the city visiting relatives. Mother bought Betty several pretty new dresses and they attended numerous festivities where the child was much petted and made over.

However, she did not seem entirely happy, and one evening mother noticed her choking back the tears.

"Why, dearie," she exclaimed, "all the good times you're having and all the lovely things! What more could any little girl want?"

Hers d-d-daddy!" sobbed Betty.

Owner's Privilege

A farmer and a fair damsel from the city were going round the farm together, and the farmer was rapidly falling beneath the spell of the town maiden's eyes:

"Now, that's a pretty scene," he said, pausing beside the fence of a paddock in which a cow and a calf were rubbing noses together. "The sight of it makes me want to do the same."

"Well, go on," said the girl, placidly, "it's your cow."

The Reason

"And now, Johnny," said the Sunday school teacher, after an elaborate explanation of the flood, "can you tell me what caused the flood?"

"Yes, ma'am," said Johnny," beaming with pride, "it rained."

In the Market Place

IN certain parts of Europe some centuries ago, the farm laborer was wont to stand in the town market place holding a straw in his mouth as a sign that he was looking for employment.

Today the uninvested dollar places itself in the open market. As to an individual, it must be offered an occupation free from personal hazard, with steady employment and attractive wages.

In providing telephone facilities for nation-wide service, the Bell System has employed millions of such dollars. The savings of more than half a million American telephone users, invested in Bell System Securities, have built the system that serves them. Theirs is an investment in service, and they themselves have served by investing.

he had scarcely so much as peeped to see, when he, too, suddenly noticed all the morning glories.

They awoke all the bumblebees far and near and made so much fuss and noise that they woke up the humming birds, who always notice what the bumblebees are up to.

Of course the humming birds immediately spied the honey-suckles, and you should have seen them scamper.

When the fairies realized what had happened they almost lost their balances in the dances, for they shook all over with laughter.

As the bumblebees and the humming birds got nearer they too, saw that they had made a mistake, but the fairies at once called out:

"Come to the party and dance, too, and we will give you honey, for we are having it for supper.

"We couldn't give a ball and dress like flowers without having flower-honey for supper."

And this delighted them all.
